INTRODUCTION

There are some events that serve as a background to fully understand the evolvement of Milford High School. The following is a series of chapters explaining those events.

Chapter I (1780-1827)

1780-1827

EARLY PRELIMINARIES

When Milford separated herself from the mother town of Mendon and became incorporated as an independent community in 1780, she considered it expedient and necessary to set up her own school system. Each district was responsible for the education of only the children within its own boundaries, and each district managed its own affairs to the extent allowed by the laws and votes of the town. This plan of management was satisfactory as long as the town had a relatively small population, but its disadvantages were soon to be felt when the town increased in size. The increase in the population of Milford Center, and the need for improvements in the educational management were to bring about many changes.

It is almost certain that no actual schoolhouse was built within the precincts of the present town before 1780. Until such a structure was erected, children were taught either in private homes or in other buildings by interested and capable townsfolk who were paid a mere pittance. The first historical mention on the town records of a schoolhouse is dated March 1, 1791; "Voted to raise 240 pounds (about $800) to build and repair schoolhouses in the Town of Milford, and each district to pay their own cost." It is very probable that the earliest schoolhouse erected was located in the first or Middle District in the center of the town. The Reverend Adin Ballou in his History of Milford is not clear on this point, but he does give a vivid first-hand description of one of the above schools—the North Purchase District School, situated about where the Number 4 Hose House now stands, and in which he taught for two winter terms, during the years 1824-25 and 1828-29. He says that the building "was of the then common fashion, perhaps thirty by twenty-five feet in dimension, posts of tolerable height, with a small porch and a chimney at the north end. It had an ample open fireplace for heating purposes, which in cold weather consumed enormous supplies of wood, sometimes half roasting the nearest sitters and leaving the most distant to shiver except when permitted under a 'please, sir,' request, to take their turns for a warming. That house would seat in the style of those days seventy-five or eighty pupils."

THE MILFORD ACADEMY

Until the year 1828 the grammar schools provided the highest educational level in the town. There was no high school. The need for a school of higher learning was undoubtedly felt by many prominent people of the town. Accordingly on February 11, 1828, some public-spirited citizens were granted a charter by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for a school to be known as "The Milford Academy." The leaders of this movement were: William Godfrey, John Claflin, Jr., and Nathan Wood. They sold thirty-three shares of stock for $50 apiece, making a total capital outlay of $1,650, to be used for the building and maintenance of the Academy that was to provide the children of Milford, whose parents could afford the tuition charge, with an education beyond the grammar grades.

The building was constructed next to the Congregational Church, on about the site that is now the present Milford Post Office. By means of an 1851 map of the town we have established its original location beyond a doubt. In the Sesqui-Centennial celebration booklet published by the Milford Daily News, there appears a cut that shows the local Congregational Church and the old Academy side by side. The school was probably opened in the fall of 1828, but of this we are not positive. The instructors who taught at the Academy during the twelve or so years of its existence were: Ira Cleveland, Harvey Mellen Chamberlain, Charles Thurber, a Mr. Morse, a Mr. Gorman, a Mr. Wilmarth, Daniel Perry, a Miss Clark, and Charles R. Train.

Unfortunately the Academy did not prove to be a financial success, and after approximately twelve years of service, it was dissolved. In 1841, the building was sold to School District #3 for $825, half the original capital. The structure served as a district school until the town took over complete control of the school districts in 1854. The building was valued at $1,500, and the residents of the district were recompensed for their loss by an abatement of taxes for the above mentioned amount.

THE BIRTH OF THE MILFORD HIGH SCHOOL (1850)

From the year 1841 until 1850 Milford was still without a high school or any other form of higher education. Perhaps the children of those days were smarter than those of us of today, and learned all that they needed to know in their eight years of schooling. During this period, the population was rising rapidly toward the 5,000 mark. As the population increased, many of the citizens realized that there was a necessity of providing high-school facilities as soon as possible, and they began to agitate for some definite action on the subject. Their agitation brought favorable results as you will see.

On September 18, 1848, a special committee was appointed to investigate the advisability of establishing a high school. The members of this committee were: Adin Ballou, Preston Pond, J. Whitman, Jr., George W. Stacey, and A. J. Sumner. On November 13th of the same year, the group made such a favorable report that as a result plans were made for the erection of the new edifice. After much debate, its location was decided upon, and we of today can commend the founding fathers on their excellent choice of location. The site chosen is the present site of Stacy Middle School. A little less than two years after the committee made its report, the high-school structure was completed at a cost of $5,790 (excluding the purchase of the site).

On November 12, 1850, the school was opened for the first time under the supervision of Principal Rev. Elias Nason and his one assistant teacher, S. Adeline Scott. There was a total enrollment of 144 scholars; 80 were boys, and 64 were girls. Thanks to Mrs. Vida Snow of this town, we are able to quote from the original catalogue of the Teachers and Pupils of the Milford High School, an eight page pamphlet published in 1851 by the "Milford Press—G. W. Stacy Printer." This pamphlet is still in excellent condition. From it we learn:

It offered instructions in the Bible, arithmetic, rhetoric, geography, algebra, geometry, surveying, history, physiology, natural philosophy, astronomy, chemistry, moral science and political economy, French, Latin, and Greek.

The Milford High School was established in 1850. "The design of it is to furnish the youth of both sexes in the town of Milford with the means of obtaining a sound and practical education...The commodious building occupies a commanding site on School Street; and with its grounds laid out in terraces and planted with trees and shrubbery, forms quite an ornament to the town."

From the pamphlet we learn also that:

"Lectures with experiments are from time to time delivered to classes—and a public examination of the pupils in all their studies is held on the last Friday of each term.

"A report of every pupil's standing in respect to scholarship, deportment, and punctuality is read publicly three times during each term and is open for the inspection of the Committee and other friends of the school."

We have not been able to gather any authentic data about Reverend Nason or his principalship, but from the information quoted above and from that which follows we can get some idea of his clear thinking and his discipline. A few of the "Regulations" that are listed in the pamphlet and adopted by the Committee on November 16, 1850, tell their own story.

1. "Scholars are strictly forbidden to cut, scratch, mar, or in any way deface any of the doors, walls, seats, or other parts of the building.

2. "Scholars must not go upon the banks, squares, turfs, or terraces around the building.

3. "Scholars are strictly forbidden to touch the bell rope or to meddle with the fire, lamps, clock or other school apparatus.

4. "Scholars are requested to clean their feet before entering school.
5. "Scholars are not permitted to eat anything whatever within the schoolhouse without permission.....not to spit upon the floor in any of the rooms.....
6. "It is expected that every scholar will.....keep his or her books and slates neatly covered and in good order.....and that every scholar will take a becoming pride in keeping the school grounds and building in perfect order....."

During the first twelve years of the history of MHS, there was no defined course of study. Each student selected any studies that appealed to him. If, after a fair trial, the pupil decided the subject didn't agree with him—or he with the subject—he dropped it and substituted another. There was no limit to the number of subjects a student could take in a year. Some scholars carried several, while others took only one. This system stands out in sharp contrast to the present carefully planned curricula and lists of required subjects. In these twelve years of a sort of take-what-you-feel-like-taking period, there were no graduations, and alack the day, there was no nice long summer vacation.

The fall term began on the first Monday in September, and continued for twelve weeks. It was followed by a vacation of two weeks. The winter term started on the first Monday in March, and it continued for twelve weeks. This was followed by a vacation of one week. The summer term commenced on the first Monday in June. It was of ten weeks' duration and continued until about the middle of August, when a vacation of only three weeks followed it. As you can see, the students at Milford High in its early days had a grand total of only seven weeks of vacation per year as compared to our total of over fourteen weeks.

Time does bring about some progress!

1862-1893

Chapter IV (1862-1893)

IMPORTANT CHANGES TAKE PLACE

In 1862, two important changes took place in the early history of Milford High School: 1.) a system of ranking was adopted, bringing to an end the hit-or-miss selection of courses; 2.) the first formal graduation was held in this year, with the following students receiving diplomas: Cora A. Chapman, Kate S. Freeman, Mary A. Parkhurst, Mark D. Shea, and Melvin A. Underwood.

Three years later, in 1865, the school had increased in size and scope enough to warrant another assistant. The faculty was now composed of three teachers. A year later, the Milford High School Graduates' Association was formed under the encouragement of Principal Frank A. Hill. Mr. Hill was later to become the Commissioner of this state. He was followed in 1870 by Silas W. Hale, who served as principal for ten years.

During this era, we find no record of any outstanding event. The population of Milford at this time was climbing steadily toward the 10,000 mark.

In 1880, Herbert W. Lull became principal. He seemed to be one of the early outstanding headmasters. Because the duties of the principal were becoming more demanding, a submaster was added to the staff of the school. One thing that he must have worried about were the cramped quarters of the school. According to the best information available, the building was constructed with the intention of accommodating about seventy-five pupils, but the enrollment had increased to such a degree that in 1881 the school building was crowded with one hundred and fifty students. In April of the same year, the Town Meeting voted to raise $4,000 to pay for enlarging the original structure. During the summer, the west wall of the building was moved back twenty-three feet for the addition of two new classrooms on one floor and a laboratory and a classroom on the other. The work wasn't completed any too soon because the enrollment skyrocketed to one hundred and ninety in the fall of 1881. This peak was of short duration, however, and it gradually receded to a normal one hundred and twenty.

On February 22, 1884, the pupils of the high school, under the sponsorship of Principal Lull, held the first of a series of three exhibitions of projects made by the students. There were one hundred and twelve exhibitors and two hundred and seventy-two exhibits. The displays ranged from examples of darning to a scientific steam engine. The proceeds from the exhibition were used for improving the school library and for purchasing "working tools" demanded by the modern school. The second such exhibition was held on April 1 and 2, 1885. This was the largest of the three, having one hundred and forty-four participants and five hundred and five displays. The third and final exhibition was presented on March 22 and 23, 1889. Although not so impressive as its predecessors, it was a financial success, clearing $161.03, a very sizeable amount in those days.

We are also indebted to Mr. Lull for starting one of the oldest traditions in the early history of the school, one that has been continued for these past one hundred and thirteen years. From its small beginning in November of 1884, with Inez L. Gay as its editor, the O.L.I., as it is now popularly called, has gradually and steadily grown until it now is an annual yearbook that has won first-class honors for itself and the school in state and national competition.

In the year 1885, the first step seems to have been taken in changing the subjects offered at the school. Drawing was introduced as a subject, but only seniors were permitted to take the course. A year later the entire program of studies was remodeled to keep abreast of the times. The two-year business curriculum was replaced by a four-year scientific course. From this date onward, diplomas were awarded only to those students who had studied at the school for four years, but certificates of credit were given to the pupils who had completed less than four years of work.

THE NEED FOR A NEW BUILDING IS APPARENT

For several years, it was apparent that the high school would again have to be enlarged or a new building would have to be constructed. The town finally decided to invest its money in a new building and in 1894, it voted to raise $40,000 for the construction of the proposed new school. After a consultation with the architects, it was discovered that $50,000 would be needed. A special Town Meeting informed the School Committee that the school would be constructed for $40,000 or it wouldn't be constructed at all. The question of a new school now hung fire for about six years, until a real fire settled the whole story. On March 15, 1900, the old structure was burned to the ground. Rumor says the cause was of an incendiary nature. The joy of the students at the prospect of a prolonged vacation was short lived, however, for they were soon moved into the old Universalist Church, located at the time, on Pearl Street. Odd as it may seem, the church was also gutted by fire. Rumor said that the cause was from an overheated furnace. The pupils still had no rest, for until the completion of the new school, they spent their class time in the G.A.R. hall of the Milford Town Library.

On July 20, 1900, the town voted to build a new school building. The sum of $60,000 was raised to furnish the town with a new high school. The contract was awarded to Dillon Brothers, one of whom was a graduate of the school, and work was begun as soon as possible. The new school was first opened in September of 1901, under the principalship of Mr. I. F. Frisbee and with a membership of 116 scholars. The stated purpose of the school at that time, we learn from the records, was "for the many who do not go on rather than for the few who advance." Four curricula were offered: College Preparatory, Institute of Technology Preparatory, Business Preparatory, and Normal Preparatory. The school was placed in a class A rating by the New England College Entrance Certificate Board, a distinction that she still enjoys. She continued to follow the precepts of the original design of the school—"to furnish the youth of both sexes in the town of Milford with the means of obtaining a sound and practical education."

—Richard Erickson, Class of 1950, as a souvenir program history of Milford High School, given to the Class of 1925 at 25th Reunion

Chapter VI

An increased membership demanded an addition to the building in the 1930s. The annex or "New Building" was opened in September of 1936. The old building was badly damaged by fire in March of 1937. It was rebuilt and continued to operate until the present newly constructed school opened in September of 1973 located at 31 West Fountain Street. The present high school is located over 65 acres of land housing an Olympic size swimming pool and many other modern day features.

The tremendous help and cooperation received from a group of dedicated individuals contributed significantly to the success of the Milford High School Alumni Directory. Some of these people provided reunion lists, while others helped Milford High School and our publisher track down hard-to-find alumni information. All "went the extra mile" to make the Milford High School Alumni Directory as complete and accurate as possible.

On behalf of Milford High School and the Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc., we extend a most gracious "Thank You" to the enthusiastic supporters whose efforts have made our directory a very special volume.
